

i am still here

Screened by Roger Baker
Cocrea. by Alexi
Director: Mischa Marcus
Survival Center

A Feature Film Exploring the Serious Issue of Human Trafficking

Thurs., Sept. 12
6:30–9 p.m.

Free Admission
Edgewood College
Anderson Auditorium
1000 College Drive, Madison, Wis.

Following the film, Writer and Director Mischa Marcus and Madison Police Department Detective Roger Baker will respond to questions.

Based on true stories of courage drawn from interviews with trafficking survivors, "I Am Still Here" is an award-winning drama that puts an unforgettable human face on the modern day atrocity of human sex trafficking in the West, especially the trafficking of children. Director Mischa Marcus gives an inside look at the devastation these young girls face on a daily basis.

"'I Am Still Here' is a story of hope and redemption told through the eyes of a 17-year-old girl recovering from her escape from seven years in captivity as a sex slave. With brutal honesty, the film captures how a life is saved through the power of friendship, the empowerment of the female spirit, and the strength of family." —Screen: Robinson review

This film contains adult content.

Sponsored by the Madison Sisters/Dominicans Against Human Trafficking